Emma went to her cousin's birthday party at Uncle Mark's house. She had so much fun with her cousins, and they always make her feel like part of the big family circle. It's wonderful to see her so happy and connected to her relatives.

I spent $70 on gas and snacks for Emma's trip to visit her grandparents. They live 150 miles away, and she loves spending time with them. She stayed for three days, and as always, they spoiled her with home-cooked meals and stories about the "good old days".

Emma spent the weekend with Aunt Sarah while John and I were both working. They had a great time together – Aunt Sarah helped Emma with some summer crafts and even took her to her soccer game. It was nice knowing Emma was in good hands and surrounded by family who love her.

Paid $100 to help cover the costs for Emma's summer stay with her grandparents. They took care of her for two weeks while John and I worked. During that time, they took her to the park, cooked her favorite meals, and made sure she felt loved and supported. I'm so grateful for the stability and care they provide her, especially during this transition.
